

Sip to Impress This Valentine's Day

Wine Market Council's Sommelier Network Shares Secrets on How Your Wine IQ Can Make This February 14th One to Remember

Ordering wine on a date can be intimidating, similar to those nerve-racking and awkward pauses during conversation. But, it doesn't have to. Wine is fun, versatile and enjoyable – and the best part is that what, when and how you drink it is entirely up to you.

Here's your chance to get some personalized wine advice from the pros – no matter how much (or little) you know about wine. Wine Market Council sommeliers are ready to spill the insider secrets on how to impress your Valentine's date with wine.

- Planning a romantic Valentine's Day dinner? Rosé Champagne, pink bubble are spectacular to drink by the fireplace with the one you love, or try Zinfandel – it's like an amazing fur coat or the best massage – wrapping you in luxury and making your problem melt away.
- Learn your "Wine Sign." Find out if you're "Scared Sip-less," a "Tentative Taster," or maybe an "Aspiring Aficionado"
